ROUNDNET

Practice Location: Intramural Field

The Roundnet Club is both recreational and competitive. This is a team sport played by two teams of two players around a roundnet. Opposing teams line up across from each other with the roundnet in the center. The ball is put into play with a serve. Once the ball is served the players can move anywhere they want. There are no sides and no boundaries. The object of the game is to hit the ball onto the net so that the opposing team can not return it. Each team is allowed up to three touches to return the ball, similar to volleyball. Possession changes as the ball hits off the net. The ball cannot hit the rim and must go off the net in one bounce. The rally is continued until the ball is not returned properly.
